PTA Minutes from the May 1, 2018 meeting

Camellia Jacobs and Cami Wilcox, Co-Presidents, welcomed us.

They presented the following business items:

1) We need to approve the slate for our new PTA Executive Board that will take effect July 1. Heidi Anderson presented the proposed candidates. She lead the nominating committee:

Co-Presidents: Cami Wilcox and Aracelis Vicente

Co-VP for fundraising: Tanea Foglia

Co-VP for Outreach: Kathy Attar

VP for Membership: Rudolph Saint Jean

Treasurer: Gaelle Seide

Recording Secretary: Shannon Lyons

Corresponding Secretary: Heidi Anderson

BCC Cluster Reps: Juliana Horowitz and Melissa Stein

MCC-PTA Reps: Kerrie Mullins-Levine and Rachel Breslin

There was a motion to pass this new executive board, it was seconded, and it was unanimously passed by the 24 in attendance.

2) We also need to approve the by-laws which were due to be updated this year. They get updated every three years. One significant change was expanding the power of the EC to create ad hoc committees when they see the need for a committee to be made. These would be in addition to our normal committees that exist for different events. The kindness committee that formed last year would be an example of this kind of ad hoc committee.

Also, there will be two vice presidents, but one is designated for outreach.

There was a motion to approve the bylaws which will be sent to the Maryland PTA. There was a second. It passed unanimously by all 24 present.

3) Another item of business was that our budget is very healthy and we have enough money to purchase the rest of Reading Safari, a program they have been building over the years at RCF. They are a set of books to be used in small groups and can also be sent home. They did a specific ask for Reading Safari at the silent auction and earned a fair amount from that. Looking at what books the school currently has and what books are needed to complete the Reading Safari sets for English and Spanish, the total needed is $12,775 dollars.

It was moved to approve this expenditure. It was seconded. It passed unanimously.

Parent Portal

Ryan McNavage was here to talk about the Parent Portal and how to access your student data.

You can see student grades and some test scores at this point.

If you'd like to access the power point visit: tinyurl.com/rcfpp

Letters were sent home in October that would allow you to get into the parent portal. If you need another letter, you can ask Carla Malowsoski and Juan Duran. Please make sure your spouse has not already accessed it.

Even though there is only 1 access id for a student, each parent can have their own logins.

What is in it?

Grades, grade history, attendance, and a document library where you can access MAP data.

If you have more than one student, they will both show up in the portal.

Under grades for elementary, you will see the grades for when the marking period is over. You do not see a current running grade. Interim grades also show up after the interim.

For the secondary grades, you see the grades in that point in time. You see the grades changing from day to day.

Under grade history, you can see grades over time from past years.

You can also check your child's attendance history.

In the document library area, you can see your different MAP reports.

For grades K-5 there is math data. (MAP-P and MAP-M).

For grades 3-5 you can see reading data (MAP-R).

There is a module (MAP Report) on that link that takes you through how to interpret the results. If you have any questions, please let the school know.

With the parent portal, you can access it on a computer or on your mobile device.

It's available on Google or Apple.

Summer Learning Opportunities: (Amy Domire and Liz Fasulo)

Ms. Fasulo-Reading Specialist:

Home minutes of reading-See the chart:

Students who read one minute per day at home will generally read 51,100 words per year and likely score in the 10th percentile on reading tests. Those who read 67 minutes per day at home will read 4,700,000 words and score in the 98th percentile. Simply put, the more you read, the more words you come across and the better you do on reading tests.

Ms. Fasulo will post this on the website and she will send home her List of Summer Life & Literacy Resources as a hardcopy (Liz's list) for some summer literacy ideas. It might be best to access from the website because there are live links.

Keep a Summer Adventure Journal: It's not for homework. You don't have to bring it back, but it's for them to keep track of all their fun adventures.

There will also be a reading menu to choose literacy related activities to complete. If they bring it back, they can be entered into a raffle.

Her advice was to live large this summer, have cool experiences and have language rich experiences. Give them experiences where they have nothing but questions.

Amy Domire-Math Resource Teacher

She is encouraging us to get away from summer packets and instead play around with numbers wherever you are. Her goal is for the students to be more flexible and fluent with numbers where you can know numbers so well that you can compose them and decompose them in many different ways and work with them very flexibly in their minds.

Examples of games:

Counting Games: count by 1s, 5s, 10s, etc. How high can we get before we get to x place.

POP: Can do the same thing counting by 5s. Anyone who hits the target number says POP and is out.

Breaking apart numbers: We have 15 pieces of fruit; some are watermelon and some are berries. How many of each do I have (can think of different ways to make it)?

Mental Math: Give them a problem like 25×19 and they don't have any paper to solve it. They have to use mental math to figure it out.

Mobi: A pouch of tiles game that is the math version of Scrabble.

Number Cards games (that will be posted on the website) can also be used for games like Go Fish, Compare (like war), Name that Number.

Math resources will be put on the Summer Packet link before school is out.
